DOORS...

Did not exist
In the days of the cave dweller.
In the pre-dawn of knowledge
There were only the cave fire,
The fearful shadows on the wall,
And darkness closing in the mind of man.

When men began to wonder how and why,
The doors began to appear,
Shut out were the hostile elements,
The fear and superstition------
Behind each door lay a field of inquiry
And the answers to new questions...

And so the Evanston student
As he stands in the corridors of ETHS
Sees before him a multitude of doors,
Locked, ajar--foreboding, inviting-- real, imaginary,
All opening on the accumulated
learning of the past
And the undiscovered knowledge of the future.
So DOORS were chosen for the Key's
theme,
For they open upon knowledge
That will shape the future
And remind us of happy, fruitful days
As we look back through them.

DOORS...

Ajar to reveal new patterns

Of education,

Of teaching techniques.

Appreciatively,

We

Watched Administration's efforts

To perfect instruction methods

Result in enthusiastic students

Who animated the new patterns

Of education,

Of progress.

DOORS...

Our school's purpose has always been to provide high quality education that will stimulate and extend each student's ability to express and live up to the special excellence that is in him. Holding a position of leadership among American high schools necessitates continued attention to improvement and change. The pursuit of this goal has resulted in the introduction of honors and college-level courses, team teaching, and innovations in the division organization and services. The school seeks to provide the quality of education that will enable each student to develop his full potential and to find, in the words of Whitehead, "the habitual vision of greatness."

Full Scale Division System Completes First Year

EDWARD M. CURRY, A.M.
Principal, Division '04

HOWARD H. NUCKOLS, A.M.
Principal, Division '24

The division system proved its efficiency this year by working smoothly to correlate the "four schools in one" with ETHS' overall plan. Introduced last year, the system confirmed its effectiveness through its success in creating four specialized units of school organization, each having its own counseling and teaching staffs, and student activity program. Headed by division principals, the units were supervised by Dr. Michael.

Mr. Ned Hoopes.

This year a photocopier, a device which makes several copies of a written item, joined the IBM machine family of the main office. Although the machine family partially relieved the office of the burden of its paper work, all the energy of the seven school secretaries was utilized to keep information on available courses, enrollment, and absences, report cards and class rank, and diverse areas of student activity up to date.

Staffs Perform

Protection of ETHS takes on a novel air when the nightwatchman rides his bicycle through the empty halls. His job is one of many of the school service staffs. Mending cracked desktops, preparing lunch for Evanstonians, providing temporary medical care for students---these are jobs of the custodians and cafeteria and health Service Staffs, respectively.

The bookroom is another service agent, providing a storehouse for extra textbooks.

The business office handles school financial records and supervises building maintenance and the running of the school store.

Quiet, unobtrusive, the service staffs constantly work to increase the comfort of students and teachers alike.

Mrs. Bernice Fitts and Miss Marjorie Leigh (AT DESK) extend their services to Elizabeth Frenzel (RIGHT) and Carolyn Hicks.

School Services

Students Distill, Dissect

Julie Cavett performs a chemistry experiment.

Ten years in the making! It was over a decade ago that Mr. Sailsbury first conceived the idea of the new ultra-modern biology lab. This and the completely remodeled physics lab were of great value to the Juniors and Seniors enrolled in a new science research seminar. Equipment for their use ranged from a complete television set-up, including camera and receiver, to micro-projector.

Besides its accelerated course program the science department offered general science, biology, chemistry, horticulture and other subjects suitable for scientific study.

Held here last winter, the Illinois Academy of Science Contest was one of the many competitions in which Evanston scientists participated to receive high honors.

Projects Courses Broaden

Gary Glick puts the finishing touches on a map for History of Civilization

Blackboards fell before the social studies' march of progress, surrendering their place to new audio-visual equipment used by sixty to one hundred-sixty pupils assembled in projects classes in room 324. These special students, members of the American problems, U. S. history, and sophomore history of civilization classes, were taught by as many as five teachers in an effort to improve instruction by teacher specialization.

The abolition of civics was another innovation. Freshmen this year took instead the first year of the history of civilization course; as sophomores they will be free to elect the second year. Amidst all these changes, the aim of social studies classes remained the same, to improve the student's awareness of the world past, present and future.

Calculating Courses Challenge

Although only one year of mathematics was required, the 1959-60 school year saw more ETHS students than ever taking four.

The stress this past year was, as it has been for some time, on gradually introducing the modern approach to math to retain the department's high standard of excellence. In keeping with this aim new textbooks were employed in 1 algebra, and a new senior mathematics course was offered.

Thus, the department continued to meet the challenge of an age that can well use the training in the patterns of clear thinking that math courses offer.

Machines, Students Have A Busy Year

Men and machines worked together in the eight business, typing, accounting, shorthand, office practice, distributive education and economics courses in business offered this year. Designed to meet the needs of both college and business bound students, the courses attracted one thousand Evanstonians.

Future plans for the department include inauguration of Gregg shorthand classes for upperclassmen next autumn.

Combined Initiates Project Courses

Combined studies, two courses in one, interrelates English and social studies. Planning activities such as the family dinner, trips to plays, and a freshman coke party, the combined studies council formed the representative "leg" of the combined studies classes.

Initiating a "projects" course into the department was one of the highlights of the year's program.

New Courses Widen

Sharp changes revitalized the school's largest department. At both the junior and senior level, two new classes called "project" were instituted. Centered around teacher teams, specialization of teaching skill, flexibility of student grouping, and a host of audio-visual aids, both projects sought to provide for student differences and achieve more effective teaching.

Senior project arranged its students into varying sized groups ranging from groups of 16 for discussions to a group of 160 for lectures, and offered a humanities curriculum rather than traditional English. Junior project centered its attention on American literature. Both project classes used extensively re-modeled room 304.

The Speech Arts Department continued its excellent course offerings in dramatics, public speaking and television.

A combination of the traditional and the modern colored the entire music department. Mr. Joseph W. Jenkins, sponsored by the Ford Foundation and the National Music Council to be Evanston's composer-in-residence for the year, provided the modern touch to the Spring and Christmas Festivals with his many compositions and arrangements. His works were performed not only by the full chorus, but also by the special singing groups, including the newly formed Senior Ensemble. Choir concerts for civic groups underlined Evanston's tradition of providing good music for the entire community.

Animate Music Scene

Musical symbols and notes glowed into life, transmitted through the instruments of skilled ETHS students. Result? In the 1959-60 school year the ETHS Symphony Orchestra provided outstanding performances at assemblies, the Christmas Festival, and the Spring Music Festival. This year the pit Orchestra soothed its audience at each of its several appearances. The Concert Band was hailed as one of the best bands in the school's history, while the Cadet Band, in only its second year, showed great improvement and potential for becoming another fine Concert Band in the near future. Under the inimitable direction of Mr. Werner, both bands seemed to have split personalities as they performed equally well whether marching to the traditional strains of the Cheer Song or performing on the the concert stage.

Supervising a nursery was an educational and enjoyable experience for girls in advanced home economics courses this year. The child development class provided a playroom-type atmosphere for preschool children and an ideal situation for students to observe the growth stages of individual youngsters and gain invaluable preparation for possible future work with children.

Girls in the home economics department competed in the General Mills Scholarship test, sponsored an open house for faculty and office personnel, and completed a career project in which interested students visited authorities in different branches of homemaking to discuss the possibilities of home economics as a profession.

Directed by Miss Kay Porter, the cast included outstanding members of the modern dance classes and modern dance club.

Other activities directly connected with the physical education department were the organization of a girls' gymnastics class and a gym-honors class for boys.

In Activities

Scrutinizing the problems it faced before taking direct action was Central Council's first step toward becoming a policy-making body. To gain ideas and techniques of student government, they effected a student program with other high school councils in the area. While Evanston representatives observed various workshop projects elsewhere, the visitors here familiarized themselves with the student lounge management and CC's unique election system. Revising the Council's constitution, establishing student supervisors over several study halls and investigating the possibility of Work Day's revival resulted in a full agenda and productive discussions at CC meetings.

Cultures with a continental touch blended into students' activities patterns through meetings of Evanston's language clubs. Filling the four clubs' agendas were movies and speakers on the background, geography and contemporary situation in countries whose language club members spoke. While members of Le Cercle Francais enjoyed colored slides of interesting spots in France, the German Club feasted at a German restaurant, and Latin students delved into a study of Roman history. At an animated party the Pan American Club broke the piñata to secure Christmas presents for everyone attending. French, Spanish, Latin and German students shared mutual enthusiasm for the language club banquets, highlights of the club activities.

Students Help Others, Look to Future

Through observation of local elementary school classes and discussions at monthly meetings, members of Future Teachers of America Club gained insight into careers in education. Frequently at meetings speakers answered the questions of these students who are considering teaching as a vocation.

Evanston Echoes; Cosmopolites Become Oriented

"Evanston Echo, Echo" reverberated over WEAW radio waves to begin each weekday broadcast by students in the radio workshop. This new noonday program centered its script around ETHS news and activities. Under Miss Crowley's guidance, a student board planned all broadcasts, and radio workshoppers wrote, directed and produced the shows.

Largely for the benefit of new foreign students, the Cosmopolitan Club attempted to interest its members in taking an active part in high school life. The club met every week under the direction of its sponsor, Miss Berquist.

'04 Clubs Plan Carnival,

Penning publicity and invitations to parents for the all-school Girls' Club turnabout "Ah-So", authoring booklets which explained Girls" Club to'04 members and setting up lobby calendars indicated the '04 group's journalistic tendencies. The girls were equally deft as year-round hostesses in the student activities office. They also found time to take charge of the Winter Carnival, formerly given by Pentangle. According to '04 Girls' Club president Betsy Wood, the annual Ice Cream Social's receipts provided a scholarship for a qualified Evanston girl. Organization of the Social topped the year as the club's final project before summer.

Extend Honor System

Q=BC. This formula became well known at ETHS in 1959, when Q (Quadrangle), the all-school boys' organization, evolved into BC (Boys' Club). The '04 Boys' Club, headed by Chuck Racine, played an active role in the new system. Launching a plan of service to Evanstonians, the boys were responsible for the honors study hall and cafeteria programs in their division. The success of the club's venture influenced visitors from other Suburban League schools to investigate the possibilities of establishing a similar project at their schools.

Beginning the fall with a "get-acquainted" party for new Evanston girls and ending the winter with the annual spring style show were two of the '24 Girls' Club activities. Headed by Toni Rawlins, the group assumed responsibility for organizing the Guest of Board dinner which honored ten outstanding girls from all divisions. The '24 girls also led the other Girls' Clubs in preparing for the Mother-Daughter Open House held in February. Participation in girls' intramurals, in lobby teas and other service projects indicated the success of the '24 Girls' Club in adapting itself to the new division system.

Cooperation with the 04 Boys' and Girls' Clubs produced the "freshman mixer" party for the two divisions. Formulating plans for the future, the 24 Boys' Club forsees extension of its honor study halls program and student supervised cafeterias in 1960-1.

It was "Ah-So" that highlighted the activities of the '44 Girls' Club. Supervising the preparations for last fall's turnabout sparked them with enough enthusiasm to win the girls' fall field day championship. Throughout the year the '44 club emphasized support of all school activities. Headed by Anne Burrows, the girls assumed the leadership position in making "Bow Day" a success. Their final project of helping organize the Graduation Day Tea kept them active until the last day of school. "Ah-So" busy year.

The banner of the '44 division Boys' Club waved over both sports and services this year, as President David Hemphill piloted his division toward greater participatation in these areas. The boys' success was reflected in their reaping participation honors in water polo, a new member of the club's athletic program. In the field of social service '44 boys also took their share of the credit for the success of Jazz Night and Club Dances.

'64 Council

Town meeting, sponsored by the '64 division council this year, produced animated homeroom discussions. During these sessions students were given the opportunity to bring up questions concerning school policy and offer suggestions for the solution of pertinent student problems. Headed by President Louis Eisenberg, the council also aimed at providing more assemblies for the division. Regular oral CC reports stimulated students' interest in the activities of their school government.

Aiming at the crown in intramurals, the '64 Boys' Club began its campaign by earning the water polo championship. A freshman-boys orientation program highlighted fall activities. Under Al Hunter the club accelerated its division's participation in Boys' Cheer Section. Assuming their share of BC's ushering-in-the-auditorium responsibility, the boys also worked on the dances, floats and various projects of the all-school BC organization.

Championship, Serve Evanstonians

Beginning the fall with a breakfast for all "Ah-So" decorators, the '64 Girls' Club took charge of "Santa's Workshop" during the Christmas season. At the workshop Evanston girls sewed yarn and stocking octopi for needy children. Acting as good-will ambassadors, the club hosted one hundred Morton girls at an Evanston-Morton girls' dinner before the Morton basketball game. In the mood for dining, the girls followed the Morton dinner with a private pizza party several weeks later. Gail Thain led them to prepare for spring by planning the second all school turnabout of the year.

Evanston's first exclusively male cast portrayed a group of Americans in a German prison camp, "Stalag 17". Stalag, the opening production of the season, was dedicated to faculty members who had been in camps similar to the one depicted. Realistic acting and effective staging produced an authentic atmosphere.

Artists' Creations Impress Students

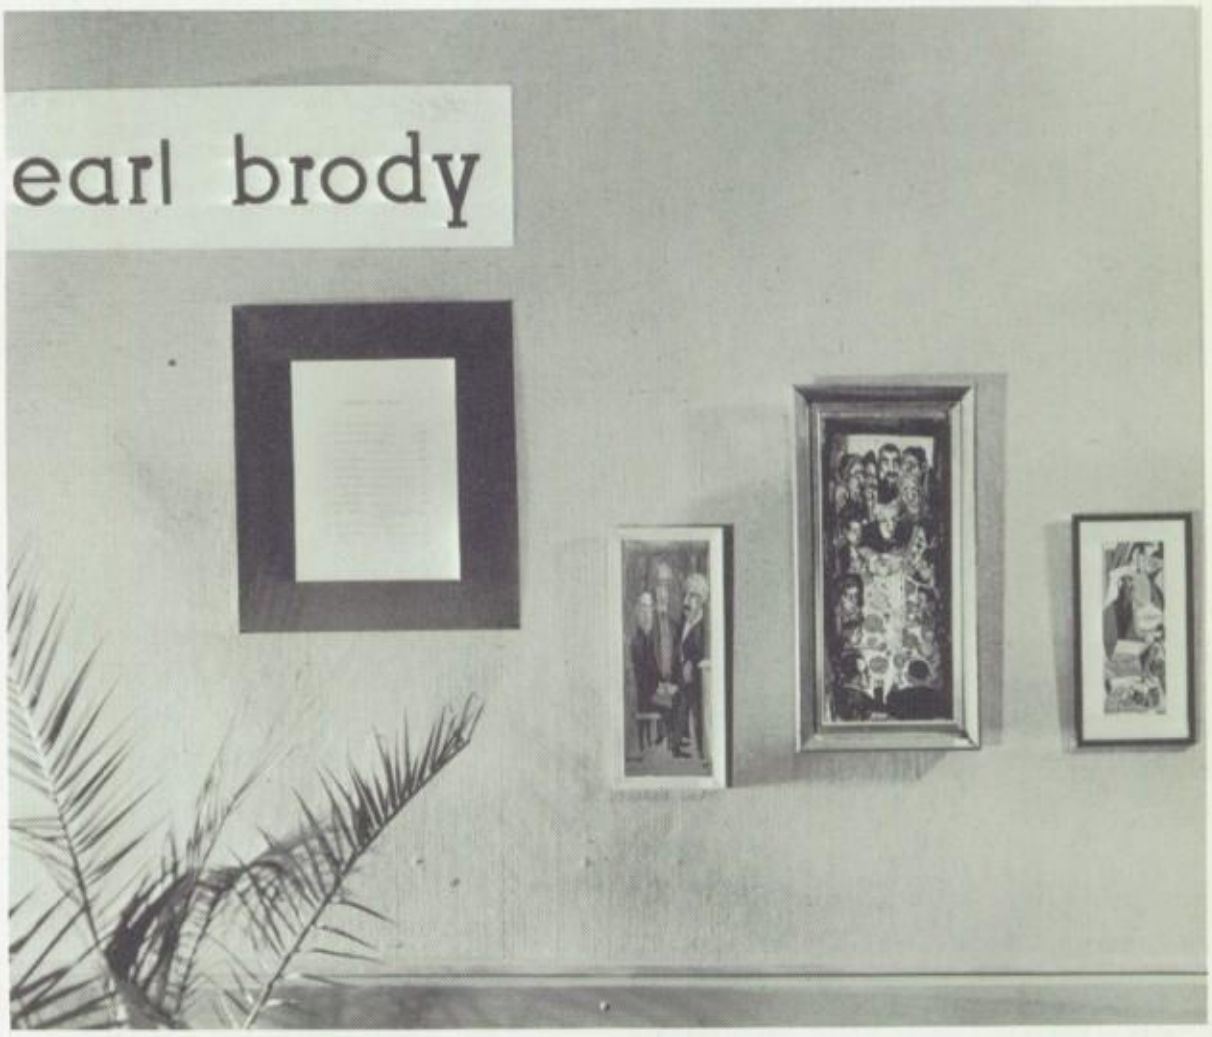
The art exhibit calendar this year featured paintings by gifted Chicago and suburban artists. Painters Kokines, Kuge, Kroutel, Palusiah, Post, Brace, Hayden and Brody were among the contributors. The outstanding Brayer Exhibit was graciously loaned for display by St. Mary's College of Notre Dame. Exhibits dealing with photography by Robert Bailey, and jewelry by Clifford Herrold brought interested students, faculty and members of the community to the art wing corridors.



Evanston graduate Earl Brody contributed these paintings for the ETHS gallery.

Oklahoma Runs Three Nights

The Oklahoma cast and crews climaxed three months of rehearsal and preparation with a polished presentation of Rogers' and Hammerstein's musical about the Oklahoma territory in 1900. Playing three nights to a full house, the company performed under Mr. William Ditton's direction and Miss Sadie Rafferty's musical supervision. Brisk dialogue, frequent choral and dance numbers and lavish costumes and sets lent more color and light touches to the American historical period portrayed than may be accurate. But history's manipulation seemed justified through the audience's captivation with Oklahoma's invasion of Evanston.

Wilder's Philosophy Enlightens Theater-goers

Produced last winter at Evanston, Thornton Wilder's Our Town concerned itself with mankind's inability to realize fully the beauty and preciousness of each moment of life. The lack of props and scenery erased all distraction from the theme and gave cast-members freedom to use their imaginative abilities. Miss Patricia Zengler directed this too-long portrayal of life as people lived it in a small New Hampshire town at the turn of the century.

Students See Light In Faith And Future

Dr. Robert I. Watson speaks on psychology at the Career Conference.

Wading through heavy snowdrifts last February, nearly two thousand career hopefuls and parents attended the eighth annual Career Conference. Films and panel discussions supplemented vocational information given by speakers from seventy-five different professions. A new section devoted to helping Evanstonians select careers attracted many undecided students. Working with the conference sponsors, CC and the Guidance Department, Mary Kaan and Sue Cummings supervised preparations for the two hour event.

"What's Important? How much does it matter?" Those attending the Evanston Youth Conference last April pondered the relative importance of tradition, ideals, facts, prejudices and faith. High points of EYC were a play, panel discussions and worship service which featured alumnus Chester Kamin as its speaker. The final afternoon to evening session climaxed a series of preparatory meetings piloted by Steve Gehlbach.

Penmen Produce Publications

Closely allied with the English department, Writers' Club encouraged ETHS writers by publishing their creations in a series of "Literary Supplements." The club's program format included a reading of portions of Dylan Thomas's works in conjunction with Reader's Theatre's presentation of Under Milkwood.

Also working in the journalistic field, Press Bureau stepped up the flow of ETHS news to the public, and the Pilot staff penned a new edition of the student handbook, which is especially beneficial to freshmen and new students.

Photographers Develop Pictures and Potential

As members of Photo Service the best student photographers in ETHS saw their glossy products appear in school publications and win regional and national awards. This year's group aided and instructed the growing number of student enthusiasts.

Depict ETHS Activities

Ever hear of a brainstorming session? This type of editorial meeting in which everyone submits at least one suggestion was used by this year's Evanstonian staff to encourage new ideas. The results were a series on high school life elsewhere, interviews with national figures, and world series information.

With team spirit, team skill, the lightweight Varsity and Sophomore Kits stole the Suburban League Championship from the brawnier teams....in the muddiest season in many years. The J. V. and Freshman teams also completed a successful season.

Realize Aims

Games moved at a fast clip during the high paced season of the basketball quintets. Laying up a steady record of wins, the Varsity team perfected its strategy techniques and coordination. JV, sophomore and Freshman cagers also wracked up impressive win-loss records, the result of their precision in timing, team skill and enthusiasm.

Wrestling Holds

Wearing new uniforms to grapple with foes, the varsity wrestling team won every match held in Beardsley Gym. Captain Sam Ward (103 lbs.), who placed third in the state meet, Lou Richter (103 lbs.), and Mike Bedinger (95 lbs.) led the matmen in piling up wins for Evanston at the meets. Perhaps increased spectator interest accelerated the varsity Kits to take third place in the Waukegan Tourney and the District and Sectional Meets.

Impressive performances by the sophomore (who took second place in Suburban League standing), freshman, and junior varsity teams held spectators' enthusiasm, and predictions of excellence and success in next year's season were heavy.

State Supremacy

Pushing New Trier to a second place position by a score of 86-69, the Wildkit Varsity Swiming team claimed Evanston's fourth undisputed state crown. The ETHS swimmers also excelled in the Suburban League contest for supremacy; the sophomores ran a close second to New Trier, the Varsity shared the league title with the Green Wave and the freshmen trounced New Trier to occupy the championship position singly.

Boys Execute Maneuvers

Behind the doors of the boys' gym wing, forty-eight people worked to introduce a new sport into ETHS. Skillfully maneuvering themselves on the trampoline, side-horse, rings and tumbling mat, the twenty-three Varsity and twenty-five Frosh-Soph members of the gymnastics teams completed an exciting season under Coach Walden's direction. Excelling on the horizontal and parallel bars, Captain Jim Loughran led the boys through the twists, turns and balances of a sport which should reap positive results for Evanstonians when it reaches maturity.

European Football Hits ETHS

As an ETHS sport soccer celebrated its first birthday this year. The debut of the Varsity team resulted in Evanston's defeating all soccer teams in the area whose formative level equaled the Kits'!

Soccer game on Evanston field.

If anyone heard shots coming from room 164 this year, it wasn't his imagination. It was a member of the rifle team practicing on the range under the homeroom in preparation for a tough but enjoyable two month season. Mr. Gassen's sharpshooters won three and lost seven of their matches. Mr. Burton, another excellent coach, transferred his talents from the successful swimming team to our Varsity and Sophomore golf teams.

In the tradition of the past two years' undefeated varsity squads, the ETHS tennis team strove for improvement this year. # Class History, 1960

There were the prom and commencement. It was all over and no one could figure out where the four years had gone.

But as the seniors stood talking to friends they might never see again, they remembered....

Four years ago--the smell of autumn was in the air--or maybe the dust from the construction beginning on the swimming pool, library, office and auditorium--as the freshmen fumbled their way past the huge seniors to find their homerooms. Cheer section had its hoarsest year and everyone yelled loudly enough to carry the football, basketball, and swimming teams to league titles. But it was Mr. Bunn who out-yelled the whole school when a short, scrappy basketball team fought its way downstate.

The construction dust was beginning to settle when the sophomores returned in the fall. "Wide, Wide World" came to Evanston complete with Dave Garroway and Charles Van Doren. The newly completed pool was host to the state swimming meet, and the auditorium was ready for the spring music festival. The main office and the library, too, were moved to their new quarters.

They were juniors now, and only the dust of the landscaping remained. They found their school completely divisionalized; each six weeks report cards were sent home, processed by an impersonal IBM. They brought back YAMO, Jazz Night, and the annual operetta. At last they elected their own officers and all-school leaders.

Finally they were seniors. The construction was complete, but their big year was just beginning. Again they faced a reorganized school. They winced at 25 minute lunch periods, and got used to hearing the bulletin sixth period. But it was their last year and they were determined to make it good. They led the new all-school clubs. They planned a revamping of CC. Their football and swimming teams won championships, and their huge basketball team almost made it downstate. They really hit the books.

Then came the prom and commencement. The ex-seniors remembered--the building, the changes, the plays, the games....Many of these things, they knew, they would never forget.

Within us lives the beauty of your might,
Which grows in us as we grew here.
Each word we read has blossomed in our sight;

Rise up, rise up and bathe your towers in the sun
A green and reaching promise Evanston.
